

Ezer Mizion: A Hand in the Dark And in Time of Crisis...

They came regularly with a burning desire to help, almost never missing their scheduled day. It was not honor that pushed them to don hot, uncomfortable “spacesuits” and go from bed to bed dispensing compassion that would bring a rare smile to the faces of their patients. For some, it was dialing the phone number of a family member so that they could hear the voice of a loved one. For others, a drink when they had lain there for hours, unable to procure a glass of water, or perhaps it was a delivery of goodies baked especially for the patient by a loving daughter. Or silently holding the hand of a patient on a ventilator. And for too many, it was saying Shema and Vidui as their neshamos ascended with no family member able to be there.

It was not honor that drove these dedicated Ezer Mizion volunteers, but now, as the situation eases, it was others who felt a powerful desire to honor them, to acknowledge the impact of the Ezer Mizion volunteers on the national disaster.

Rabbi Chananya Chollak, founder of Ezer Mizion, together with the Ezer Mizion senior staff members and branch directors, was invited to the Knesset for a ceremony and national recognition with MK Moshe Gafni, chairman of the Knesset’s financial committee. Yisroel Yeret, director of the Ezer Mizion Yerushalayim branch, and Moshe Hillel, the activity coordinator, were honored with a certificate for their selfless devotion, caring and professionalism during the Covid crisis, assisting all those in need throughout the pandemic.

Another prestigious ceremony was held at

worked alongside hospitals across the country recruiting and training people who had recovered from Covid to assist in the corona wards with whatever necessary to ease the workload of the nurses and medical staff. Even such basics as feeding patients and bringing drinks could not be handled by the overloaded staff. The Ezer Mizion volunteers literally saved lives.

TORAH UMESORAH’S “DIVERSE LEARNERS INITIATIVE”

BY SHMUEL FLEISHER

Torah Umesorah’s Diverse Learners Initiative (DLI), with the generous sponsorship of the Karfunkel family, has committed to meet the needs of every child in the mainstream classroom by training a qualified learning specialist in each school who will oversee the tutoring, services, and assessments taking place, ultimately affecting every student in the school.

At the conclusion of the first two years of the DLI program, participating and prospective schools were invited to the DLI “Shabbos of Chizuk” over the weekend of Parshas Chukas at the Holiday Inn in Stamford, Connecticut.

Participants got to interact with DLI directors, Mrs. Rivky Perlow and Rabbi Chaim Wein, and the staff in attendance. Presenters of DLI training, including Rabbi Dr. Aharon Hersch Fried, Rabbi Dr. Zev Brown, and Dr. Shmuel Mandelman, clinical director of DLI, delivered training sessions over the weekend and were available for consultations. A panel on Shabbos afternoon with Rabbi Dr. Brown, Rabbi Avraham Y. Altusky, and Rabbi Simcha Sussna, gave practical suggestions for common classroom dilemmas surrounding weaker learners, social skills deficits, and attentional difficulties.

For many participants, the weekend provided an opportunity to reflect on all they have accomplished over the past years, and a chance to consolidate what they learned in their 20 training sessions held over the school year. The DLI Toolbox, a publication of remediation strategies and ideas, provided insights to take back to their schools and share with their staffs.

Most importantly, participants spent Shabbos in the company of roshei yeshiva who addressed the event. Rav Elya Brudny of Mir Flatbush set the tone with his charge after Kabbolas Shabbos. Rav Aharon Dovid Goldberg, rosh yeshiva of Yeshivas Telz Cleveland, joined Rav Brudny for a Q&A session on Shabbos afternoon. Participants had submitted their questions in advance, and the roshei yeshiva provided direction on a range of issues. TU’s menahel, Rabbi Dovid Nojowitz, addressed the audience as well.

Rabbi Ahron Kaufman, rosh yeshiva of Yeshiva Ateres Shmuel of Waterbury, spoke of his personal experiences with bochurim on whom others might have given up. He told of a time rabbeim came to tell him that a certain bochur needed to leave the yeshiva. They gave their ultimatum — either him or them. Rabbi Kaufman read to them from the Igros Chazon Ish and ultimately, they agreed that there might be hope. In that case, asked Rabbi Kaufman, whom should he throw out? The bochur, or the rabbeim who could not figure out how to work with him?

On Sunday morning, Rabbi Shlomo Goldberg, principal of Yeshiva Aharon Yaakov-Ohr Eliyohu of Los Angeles and trainer in the TU Aish Dos Principals’ Training, helped the DLI learning specialists conceptualize their role in the school. He offered leadership suggestions and provided practical ideas from his school on how DLI’s mission could be brought to fruition within the regular school environment.

The networking, collaboration, and chizuk left participants charged and invigorated, ready to help their schools reach every child.
